Cop on the Edge – Single Science – Released 20th June

Cop on the Edge release their debut album Single Science on Monday 20 June in all major download stores and selected independent record stores. This motley collection features Macca, love on the battlefield, Morrissey, Aberystwyth, the sound of future cycling, Gloria, The Sun, screaming, clapping, Jimmy Page and the short white heat of love. All wrapped up in pop wonder and sprinkled with hints of Devo, New Order and Clor.

Featuring Jim on lead vocals and vitriol, Steve on guitar and Greek chorus, Anna on boards and technology and James on drums and cricket, they met at Jim's birthday party some years ago where Steve made Anna cry by re-enacting a Morrissey gig.

In answer to anticipated questions:

No, they are not police officers. No, they have never been arrested. No, they do not think it would be a good idea to do a photo shoot near a police car, staring moodily through a barred window or dressed like Starsky and Hutch.

No they are not "the future of music", they are too old. Yes, they think guitar music is not as popular as it once was. No, that's not really a problem – most of it is a bit dull.

Yes, the music industry is probably dying. No, its not our fault – there's a guy in Bolton, ask him.

Yes, the songs do sound quite different from each other, don't they? No, they don't see this as a problem – unless you think it's a problem? Oh Christ, it's a problem isn't it?

Yes, they'd like to be a bit famous please. No, not famous enough to be in the papers, just famous enough to get free stuff from Halfords.
